

Charlisse

Charlisse is the kind, mild-mannered, and quiet crown princess to the Northern district of the Underworld. However, she's been stuck into the role by her mother, and has no desire to be there. Her need for freedom and self-exploration often brings her to the Overworld, where she can immerse herself in diverse cultures, history, books, and plant life. Over time, she has developed a unique interest for antiques, as well as a soft spot for lost or broken toys.

However, as a price for constantly leaving home, Charlisse was appointed the task of searching out wandering spirits in the Overworld.

Merlot

Merlot is the consequence of a violent act: an aggressive spirit left by a murdered teen. He has no true form, but shifts between inky states of being. His years of solitude have tainted his spirit and taken its toll on his mentality, leaving him with a rather unpredictable personality.

He lacks fear, and has a bad habit for taking almost everything as a challenge. He is considered to have a childish nature, in part due to a lack of mental growth during life.

Charlisse finds him in an old antiques warehouse, and due to loneliness and a disdain for solitude, Merlot forms an attachment with her.

